

Star Trek

From Memory Alpha, the free Star Trek reference. Jump to: navigation, search

Geordi La Forge and Worf enjoying a meal at the Replimat. The replimat in 2372.A replimat is a self-serve eatery where the food and beverages are provided by replicators.

There is a replimat located on the Promenade of Deep Space 9 where one can order a wide variety of food and beverages from several replicators. However, the Replimat does not feature Ferengi foods.

It is one of three areas on the station suitable in size and seating accommodations for large social gatherings and informal meetings, the others being Vic's Las Vegas Lounge and Quark's Bar, Grill, Gaming House and Holosuite Arcade. The Replimat is also where the station's inhabitants eat a majority of their mid-day meals and the site of frequent lunch appointments. (DS9: "Emissary"; TNG: "Birthright, Part I") It was at the Replimat that Julian Bashir first met his future friend Elim Garak. (DS9: "Past Prologue")

There was a Japanese replimat on the Embarcadero in San Francisco. Kathryn Janeway recommended it to Chakotay when he was preparing to infiltrate Species 8472's San Francisco simulation on Terrasphere 8 in 2375. (VOY: "In the Flesh")